This is a point which Quebec has not given much prominence. > Quebec's new arrangement with France comes within this category, although Ottawa had to act with alacrity to complete its understanding with Paris before the Quebec entente was formalized. The question arises: What if Ottawa chose to refuse, for one reason or another, its co-operation in legitimatizing such an agreement? In the current condition of turmoil affecting Quebec, such a refusal of that province could have disturbing repercussions.

The fact remains, however, that Canada's sovereignty, as displayed in our relations with other nations, must remain wholly vested in Canada's government. There must be no whittling of that power by any province or the fabric of our nationhood will suffer. The principle has or international law. Bogus Clause in the Pension Bill of solemn farce, has given its approval at the committee stage to clause 115 of the Canada Pension Plan which presumes to do not do: namely to ime legislative fetters on Parliaments of the future. No one -- not even Miss LaMarsh--No one attempted to defend the clause on constitutional grounds and Mr. Stanley Knowles, Western an undoubted friend of the Canada Penon Plan, opposed it as "silly." is no evidence that the committee regarded this as a serious objection.

The origins of this pretentious clause are to be found in the negotiations with the provinces on the pension plan. As frequently noted on this page, there is an obvious danger that the scheme, even if actuarially sound at the outset, may be rendered unsound in the future if pensions become, as in the past, the sport of politics. Mr. Robarts of Ontario, particularly anxious that safeguards be inserted to prevent unilateral changes in provisions of the act, particularly in regard to benefits and contribution

For Mr. Robarts

To allay Mr. Robarts' concern, clause 115 was made part of the legislation. Parts of it read as follows:

(2) Where any enactment of the Parliament of Canada passed after the coming into force of this act contains any provision that alters, or the effect of which is to alter, either directly or indirectly and either immediately or in the future, the general level of benefits provided by this act or the rates of contributions provided for by this act, it shall be deemed to be a term of such enactment, whether or not it is expressly stated therein, that such provisions shall come into force only on a day to be fixed by proclamation of the governor in council, which day shall not in any case be earlier than the first day of the third year following the year in which any notice of intention to introduce a measure containing a provision to such effect was laid before Parliament."

To Delay Change

In other words the act presumes to impose a three-year delay before changes may take effect and, if the act of another Parliament fails to make this clear, the delay "shall be deemed to be a term of such enactment."

In sub-section 4, six types of possible alterations are listed. Then again we have the words: "It shall be deemed to be a term of such (future) enactment, whether or not it is expressly stated therein, that such provision shall come into force only on a day to be fixed by proclamation of the governor in council; which proclamation may not be issued, and shall not in any case have any force or effect, unless the lieutenant governor in council of each of at least two-thirds of the included provinces, having in the aggregate not less than two-thirds of the population of all the included provinces, has signified the consent of such province

Presumptions

Here there are three presumptions. The first is that this Parliament has a right to read its own intentions into the acts of future Parliaments. The second acts of future Parliaments. The second is that a proclamation of the governor in council, based upon an enactment of a future Parliament, shall have no effect unless conditions imposed by this Parliaments. ment have been duly met. The third sets a specific condition; alterations will have no effect unless two-thirds of the included provinces of the included population have given their assent.

This seems, remarkably, to have satisfied Mr. Robarts. For, after quoting the agreement, he said: "In effect this gives the people of Ontario, through their government, a clear right to be consulted in the future and to decide upon the implications and desirability of any change that may be proposed. It provides an effective veto over changes of subance with which we may not agree."

Rosy Outlook

Miss LaMarsh is, of course, entitled to her opinion that no future Parliament would be so irresponsible as to act in a manner inconsistent with this bogus The plan, in her view, will fill us all with such a sense of well-being that no one in his right mind would dream of tinkering with it. This is the which legislation appears to sponsoring ministers.

Others evidently have had their One of them was Mr. Robarts, whose mind is now being set at ease by the sham veto incorporated in clause 115.

Abortive Moscow Meeting

THE abortive international conference of Communists ended in Mosco Friday with a small sigh of relief.

The only lively things about it had been the off-stage noises: outside Russia, the fulminations of the Chinese and Albanians, and inside, the violent clash between Asian students and Russian police in front of the American Embassy

The anti-American demonstration, which turned into an ugly anti-Russian riot when Soviet mounted police started riding down their Asian guests, was clearly instigated by Peking to coincide with the conference meeting in complete secrecy in another part of the city-to embarrass the Russians and to bring to the surface in Moscow itself differences which Premier Alexei N. Soviet Revisionists are seeking . . . to help American imperialism to change the situation in its favor."

Russians Harassed

It was against this background that the conference found it expedient to demand the instant withdrawal of U.S. forces from Viet Nam. The Russians must be very harassed indeed. Already China is shouting about the bloody intervention of Soviet police in the service of America, beating down revolutionary The conference itself was scarcely the shadow of what it should have been. As originally planned for December, it was to be a critical period in Nikita Khrushchev's conflict with Mao Tse-tung. Representatives of 26 parties were to assemble in Moscow to prepare the way for a grand conference of all the parties which would end either in China's sub-mission or in the Chinese being drummed out of the Communist movement.

China's response was to declare that the day this conference opened would be the day on which the Soviet Communist Party dug its own grave. Many pro-Soviet parties objected to the conference for a variety of reasons-always oster sibly, because of the risk of irrevocably splitting the Communist bloc.

Some believed in this excuse; others knew that the irrevocable split had taken place, but preferred in their own national interest to preserve the confusion and the resultant flexibility (favoring their individual independence) of the status

After Khrushchev's fall the conferer was postponed while his successors tried mend fences with the Chinese. believed that Mao Tse-tung told Kosygin in Peking that China would attend the conference only if the Russians formally repudiated the whole of Khrushchev's anti-Chinese line and apologized for it. This was not on. Although some of Khrushchev's colleagues may have replied one woman

Had the conference been cancelled, this would have been seen as capitulation to Chinese pressure. There had to be a meeting of some kind. But, until the last moment, not even the Russians knew how many parties would attend seven of the original invitees refused, including Rumania, on Russia's own doorstep.

Representation was on a low level, and all pretense that it was a drafting conference for the major conference to come, was given up. The meeting was transformed into a discussion of ways and means of achieving Communist unity.

Harmony in

UNITY NOT YET

Churches

By CECIL NORTHCOTT from London

THE Vatican decision to join in "working group" with the World Council of Churches to study the principles and methods of collaboration is most important move made since the Reformation to get the Roman and non-Roman Churches on speaking terms

The establishment of the group six Roman Catholics and eight non-Romans — is not for the purpose of discussing the unity of the churches, but-for devising ways and means in which the separated churches can co-operate in many different spheres of practical

The new plan is the logical outcome of the creation by Pope John XXIII of the Secretariat for Christian Unity, within the organization of the Vatican itself, and of the contacts which that secre-tariat has been able to make during the last five years with the non-Roman

Behind the decision stands the modest figure of Msgr. J. G. M. Willebrands, the Dutch Jesuit, who, under the direction of Cardinal Bea, has travelled the world on the mission of reconciliation and friendship between the churches which Pope John promulgated when he called Vatican Council.

Reciprocal Courtesy

Willebrands has placed his "observ-ers" at a score of non-Roman Catholic church conferences, always at the invitation of the organizers, who have given unprecedented privileges to them. In re-turn the planners of the Vatican Council gave seats of honor to the 40 "observers" from the non-Roman churches at the Council. They sat in St. Peter's within easy speaking distance from the presidents, and were given every facility for understanding and reporting on the life and work of the council.

This two-way traffic between the separated sections of the Christian faith was aided by another Dutchman, Dr. W. A. Visser 't Hooft, the general secretary of the World Council of Churches, who the eve of retirement, sees some result from his patient diplomacy. With the heavy weight of more than 200 churches of the Protestant, Anglican and Orthodox churches in his Council, Visser t' Hooft has had to be wary of his step, for there is still much suspicion about the basic intentions of the new Vatican policy towards the 'separated brethren.'

Behind these two Dutchmen towers impressive figure of 81-year-old Cardinal Bea, who has successfully withstood his more conservative colleagues of the Roman Curia, and remains loyal to the vision and policy of Pope John.

Key to Future

Cardinal Bea regards the "working group" link with the World Council of Churches as a key to the future because the World Council is able to hold together such a diffuse collection of churchmen and church traditions. It makes the dialogue between Rome and non-Romans all the easier to handle, and as a recognition of this the Vatican agreed to six Romans as opposed to eight non-Romans.

Another immense advantage of the new procedure is the fact that Asian, African and Latin American churches can be brought into the discussion. It will not be a Western dialogue, but will be fully representative of world Christendom. Up to now only Rome has been able to speak in truly world terms, but in this new encounter there will be a territorial, if not a numerical parity.

Topics for the "working group" touch on practically every field of the Christian church's responsibilities. Problems such as religious liberty, mixed marriages as religious liberty, mixed marriages and proselytism are old ones which may have new light thrown on them as the churches look at ways of collaborating in philanthropy, social, international and onary affairs. At least, that is the hope of the men behind this excit move in the history of the Christian

Prospecting Discouraged

For many years the mining industry in British Columbia has supported the concept of multiple use of the resources of the province. Proof of this can be found in the proceedings of B.C. Natural Resources Conferences over the past 15

It is ironical that the Department of Recreation and Conservation, a product of these conferences, is now in the fore-front of those apparently wishing to restrict and prevent effective multiple use through proposed new park legislation. The principal accomplishment of the new Park Act seems certain to be discouragement of prospecting and mine development of prospecting and mine development of prospecting and mine development. ment of prospecting and mine deve ment in large areas of B.C. where chances of finding new mines are quite

Take the massive circular stairway in Craigdarroch Castle. Add a popular fishing lure and a book on the habits of salmon on this Pacific Coast. Top it with a misty morning at Cowichan Bay, a duel arranged by the old Joker's Club of this city and a bond-selling safari during the Second World War.

A strange mixture of ingredients, you say? Not one thing appears to go with another? Yet there was a man in the city a few days ago who could supply all the connecting links. In fact, he is so closely associated with everything I have mentioned, he soon makes an orderly pattern out of what seems—as you read-to be merely a hodge-podge of events. His name is Harry Howard and he lives

In a little town named Sequim (you pronounce it SQUIM), not far from Port Angeles, in the State of Washington.

He was here to visit friends and to bring to life a batch of memories.

He's not young now. But, looking back he can boast of a varied and colorful life that even includes a stint of several years broadcasting from Seattle's Victory Square where he sold thousands of dollars worth of United States

He had a hitch in the United States Navy, based at Bremerton, and a peacetime position as chief of police of a Washington State town. He has written many articles about fish and fishing and he has talked of the same subjects on radio programs. He had a book published, "Pacific Salmon of the Northwest." It's still well-known to fishermen across the border. He also gained a reputation, at one time of being the best salmon fisherman on the

Gradually his fame and his fishing prowess filtered across to this city. Victoria could boast of its own expert fish-ermen—and it did. Loudest voices were heard

In the Joker's Sports Club of that day.

Finally these voices became so insistent it was decided to invite Mr. Howard to come from Seattle as a guest of the club. And, to match him in a salmon fishing duel with the best among the members. about it last weekend, Harry Howard said they all went up to Cowichan Bay one morning "at the crack of dawn.". "They picked the best man they had to fish against me," he recalled. "We were each to have one half hour in the boat, no more, no less. Everyone else was to stay ashore."

He had his fish in a matter of 15 minutes. The Joker's champion came in empty-handed 'I'd been working on a new flasher and I used it that morning," he explained. "I gave it all the credit but the boys insisted on putting my eatch down to Harry Howard's luck.

over to Mr. Howard's brother-in-law, a Wash ngton State commercial fisherman named

He improved it, used it to advantage and finally sold it. Today it's known as the Aber and Al lure and its used by fishermen all along the Washington coast. Harry Howard is still loud in praise of the hospitality extended to him by the Joker's Club. They were a grand bunch of fellows! We yarned about fish and fishing for half the night. I wonder where they all are now."

How does the circular stairway at Craigdarroch Castle fit in this story?

It seems this salmon expert's father, Frank Howard, was a cabinetmaker and a specialist He learned his trade in England, and, according to his son, you'll see his work pre-served in some of the old mansions over there. This expert cabinetmaker finally decided to emigrate. He took his young family to Australia and from there came to State of Washington, arriving just in time for Harry to be born in a Port Townsend hospital.

A few years later, in Victoria, Robert Duns-uir, Vancouver Island's famed coal baron, started to build his castle on the hill, at the top of Fort Street. He had heard of Frank Howard and had een some of his work on one of his business trips to England and he was determined to find him and to have him do work at Craigdarroch.

Dunsmuir persisted until he traced the cabtmaker to Seattle where he persuaded him to create the strong, graceful stairway in the

That stairway still stands today. It was one of the things Harry Howard came to Victoria

Next time he'd like to look up some of the Joker's Club members he met years ago and to renew acquaintance with them.

"Who knows," he said last weekend, "we might even try another fishing duel."

NATURE on the ISLAND

By Cliff Carl

Have you planted an oak tree lately? For that matter, we may well ask has anyone started a young oak recently? Perhaps it's time to do something about maintaining a supply of one of our most unusual trees.

Our Garry oak is unique in that it is the nly species growing in this part of the Pacific Northwest. Its normal range is from San Francisco Bay in California north to British Columbia, but in this province it is found only on Southern Vancouver Island and Gulf Is lands and up the east coast to Comox. Small isolated stands are found at Alberni and the Fraser Valley of the mainland at Yale and Sumas Mountain.

Even in Washington State to the south of us oak is not a common tree; the nearest stand of any size is south of Tacoma and few stragglers extend northward beyond It seems that this species has reached its northern limit in our area; our trees therefore are living in what may be called marginal country for them.

When the white man first arrived, Southern ancouver Island supported exten oak mixed with arbutus in open park-like groves much as we see in small sections about the city of Victoria today. Soon, however, areas were cleared for settlement and farming and the oaks began to disappear. Now practically no undisturbed natural stands of the oakarbutus association exist except those in private holdings.

Of course we still have many oaks throughout the city and elsewhere. They thrive well in private gardens and in boulevards, in fact too well. With competition removed and stimu-lated by water and chemical fertilizer they grow rapidly and sometimes become a nuisance if too close to homes or power lines.

As decorative trees they have great appeal. Whether in full leaf or bare as they are in the winter months their rather grotesque shape is most attractive. No two individuals are ever exactly alike, the greatest variation being found in the pattern of branching.

In most trees the branches show much originality in their form, twisting and doubling back on themselves in a characteristic manner.

In extreme cases a branch may curve downwards almost to ground level before elbowing sharply upwards to take its place with other more orthodox in plan.

Occasionally branches are dropped and the stub or scar on the trunk rots inward to form a bark-rimmed cavity-often a home for a screech owl, flicker or other bird of similar In time the trunk may become hollowed by decay, weakening the tree so that it may break off or topple over unexpectedly. This tendency to shed parts or to fall with no warning is the oak's greatest drawback; around homes trouble from this source can be minimized by regular inspection.

The wood when dry makes excellent fuel, burning with a steady heat and leaving relalittle ash. As lumber, however, it is greatly inferior to other species of oak, being brittle and prone to rot quickly. Dying or dead sections are likely to be attacked by several species of wood-boring beetles, including the giant prionus, probably the largest species in Months after dry oak wood North America. has been stored in a basement, a crop of beetles may emerge to worry a hous into thinking his house is infested with destructive pests. These are merely adults whose development from grubs in the wood has been hastened by the warmth of the basement. Outdoors they would have appeared unnoticed and at a later date.

Historically, our oak links us with the old Hudson's Bay Company since it was named after Nicholas Garry, one of its officials. Besides, it is a tree very distinctive of a special part of British Columbia, namely southern Vancouver Island and adjacent islands. Such a unique member of our flora is worth perpetuating, yet one seldom sees a young tree that has been planted by man.

Perhaps it is time we treasured s the volunteer oaks that spring up in out-of-the-way corners of the yard. The time may come when we will want to move them to more favorable sites to replace the old monarchs that some day will disappear. '

Education Minister Leslie Peterson said the B.C. government feels the best way to remove financial barriers to a university education is to provide scholarships and bursaries. He was commenting in the legislature on requests by Mrs. Lois Haggen (NDP-Grand Forks-Greenwood) and Liberal Leader Ray Perrault that B.C. emulate Newfoundland's de-

SPORTS

By SHIRLEY POVICH (The Washington Post)

POMPANO BEACH, Fla.—Their old pal and teammate, Dule Long, strolled into the camp of the Washington Senators and cut short their loud and friendly greetings to him. "Stay out of my way, you guys," he said, "I'm learning to hate ball players.

Dale Long had joined the camp of the enemy. Yet, after all these years as one of them, as contentious a ball player as ever snarled at an umpire, the 39-year-old first baseman had just graduated from an umpire's school and had his diploma as a man in blue. All of this after 21 years as a ball player and a performer for six major league teams.

"Well, it's a living," said Long. "A new career, I'm hoping.

Graduated top of my class in Al Somers' umpire school, studied the rules four hours every night, answered 236 questions in my final test, and know more about baseball than I ever learned in all those 21 years I played it."

He'll be starting out this season, he said, in the Eastern League where they've offered him a job on the umpiring staff, but he's aiming at the majors in a couple of years. When and if he does make it to the big leagues, he'll be the most imposing if not the best umpire. In a blue suit he will measure six-feetfour and 220 pounds of authority.

He Brought More Than Tuition Fees

At the Al Somers' school for umpires at Daytona Beach for its six weeks, there was special respect among the other aspiring pupils for student Dale Long. Here was a fellow who had brought along something more than his $180 tuition. He had put in 10 years in the majors as a ball player, posted one unequalled home-run record and was a first baseman and pinch-For one stretch of 10 days in 1956, Dale Long was the most famous ball player in the majors. That was when he hit eight more runs in eight consecutive games for the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Yankees to win the 1960 pennant with his .366 pinch-hitting record in their late-season drive,

Long became one of the Washington Senators' originals in 1961 when the league expanded to 10 teams and the Yankees offered him for sale for $75,000. In 1962-63 he was back with the Yankees, pinch-hitting and collecting two more World Series shares. He chucked it as a ball player after drifting down to Jacksonville last season and cracking two ribs when he tried to break up a double play and encountered the stubb

Ball Players Don't Know the Rules

Long said the schooling he gained in the umpires' seminars founded by the late great Bill McGowan was a revelation to him. "I learned that ball players don't know the rules of the game, only umpires do," he said. "As a ball player I was "As a ball player I was mostly interested in whether the ball I hit was scored a base hit or an error. I learned there was a lot more to this game.

"I never knew, for instance, why sometimes the man on first got two bases on the pitcher's overthrow on the pickoff play, and why sometimes the umpire only gave him one base. But now I've been drilled on the rules. It all depends on from where the pitcher makes the throw. If he makes the pickoff throw while standing on the rubber and it goes wild the man on first is limited to one base. If the pitcher backs off the rubber and then throws to a base he is classified as an infielder and you get two bases on an overthrow."

As a first baseman with the Senators, Long was drawing a $25,000 salary, but he's taking a cut as a rookie umpire. In the Eastern League, he'll get about $7,500, but if he can graduate to the majors be'll move up to $15,000 or more "and that will suit me. It is better than tending bar in my place in North

Keep Quiet Until Catcher Has Ball

At the umpiring school, hours were spent simulating every possible play that could come up in a ball game, Long said.
"They had us running the bases until our tongues hung down to our knees, or they had us calling plays from every position that an umpire was supposed to be in. They cautioned us against the temptation to be too quick and trying to call plays before they happened.

"On balls and strikes they pounded into us not to call anything until the ball was in the catcher's mitt., Sometimes we were so eager we found ourselves calling 'Str-ball!' or 'Ball-We had everybody confused, including ourselves, but we were learning

'Some of the guys at the school really weren't cut out to be umpires. They didn't have their hearts in it, unlike myself and the others. One day two of us were working around second hase and it was the other guy's call on a steal. In his confusion he made three calls on the same play—'Safe!' 'Out!' and 'Oh, he made three calls on the same playthe hell with it.' That night he quit the school in disgust, mumbling 'Decisions, decisions, decisions'.'

2-Year Courses To Recommend Eventually

Health Minister Eric Martin Tuesday predicted in the legislature that nursing schools in B.C. eventually will drop the

He said his department has discussed the possibility with the Registered Nurses Association of B.C. including problems such as the doubt that two years of experience would qualify a girl for heavy responsibilities in a rural hospital.

But, he said, the RNABC favors the idea of eliminating service from the three-year courses now and "the schools of nursing probably in time will reduce it to two years."

Rib cages sometimes are broken when doctors try a desperation closed heart massage on apparently dead persons, Health Minister Martin admitted to the house. He was commenting on statements by Opposition Leader

Robert Strachan that some relatives have expressed concern to find that autopsies of elderly persons given emergency ireatment showed broken bones and ruptured organs.

Mr. Martin said the masage treatment "is very, very rough and rugged. It even causes broken ribs at times.

"But don't be alarmed about this. There is no cruelty."

He said a health department official investigating the re-ports said that the fractures have occurred only in persons who already were dead on arrival at hospital emergency wards and doctors made one final effort to stimulate the heart by frantic massage of the chest.

One report indicated that one out of six apparently lifeless persons have been revived by the massage treatment

Health Minister Martin was again accused of encouraging two standards of hospital care in B.C.

Opposition leader Robert Strachan said it was morally wrong that a patient ordered into semi-private or a private ward accommodation by his doctor should have to pay more than the basic $1 a day under the British Columbia Hospital

Mr. Strachan said that under the BCHIS all patients were guaranteed the same standard of hospital care for the $1 a day

Property of the second of the he said. "Accommodation is a public ward, a semi-private ward or a private ward. Care is something else again. And when a doctor orders a patient into semi-private or private accom-modation for the patients good or for the good of other people in a public ward, that constitutes care. It is ridiculous that a patient should have to pay the difference."

Tony Gargrave (NDP-Mackenzie) entered the debate to say he strenuously protested Mr. Martin's bluff, and evasion. He said the system of semi-private and private wards was as outdated as the third class railway coach. "It caters only

He asked the minister to "cut out the nonsense and make sure that when a person goes into hospital the type of treatment

Mr. Martin said his department would make study of the NDP protest and do whatever was "in order legally."

The mortgage was paid off last year and by terms of the agreement, the city's three votes now will be matched by two for Saanich and one for Oak Bay. Esquimalt, which does not own its own water distribution system, is given a courtesy seat

The amending bill also includes a provision authorizing the board to purchase items up to $5,000 in value without automatically requiring a tender call. Present limit is $1,000.

Anthony Gargrave (NDP-Mackenzie) introduced a private bill to establish legal aid as a right.

Every person could obtain legal aid but would have to make a contribution, based on income, to a fund that would be subsidized by the province for compensating the lawyers. Minimum contribution would be $5.

This is the first year for the Delta 88. Man, does it set a precedent!

This is the start of something grand. New name. New series. New everso-fancy way of driving an Olds. In fact, this brand-new Delta 88 has so much more to offer you, it sets a new precedent in luxury for its price

Like, for instance, more style. The Delta 88 has rich chrome mouldings on the body and window frames. A very distinctive rear deck panel. More interior luxury, more comfort. Both front and rear seats are foampadded and the upholstery is of the kind you usually find only in the Nighty-Eight series. You'll notice nice touches, too, like carpeted lower door panels, deluxe armrests, and an instrument panel complete with courtesy and map lamps.

A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

More power. You can go up from the standard 310-horsepower Super Rocket V8 to a sizzling 370 if you wish. More satisfaction. You can't really set a price on satisfaction, but there's no doubt it's here. The new Delta 88 will make you purr like a pussycat, or like a Delta.

Why not see it, price it, drive it soon? We kind of feel it'll set a new precedent in car value for you.

Aids to Help You Land 'One That Got Away'

By Penny Saver

In spring, a man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of—fishing? That may sound like a crazy statement, but I understand that with spring approaching, the menfolk are dusting off their tackle, and preparing to venture forth to land the "big one that got last year. Menfolk! Lend an ear!

I was roaming about one store, recently, and found some wonderful items for you sportsmen. One such item is to keep your hands warm on those cold, dreary mornings in a duckblind or on a boat. (I know from experience that even the warmest summer days are often preceded by cold, cold dawns on the

The hand-warmers I found selling for $1.98 are small fabric-bound boxes, containing a small cartridge of charcoal compound. Light the end of the charcoal and close the lid of the box. Now you have an item to warm the cockles of your heart and your fingers. (In case you're worried about fire hazard, these boxes are completely lined with spun-glass wool to protect the box from burning.)

It's a wonderful thing to have at a hockey game! Refills for these sell for 98 cents a dozen.

Anyone owning small boats or runabouts will love the new anchor I found. This compact boat-stopper is fitted with four prongs which easily slip off and fit into the centre shank to make it easier to carry. It's a wonderful item to have if you are freshwater Tishing and want to stop midstream to fish. Price of this

For fly fishermen, I also discovered small lure boxes that float in case of accident. These are of waterproof plastic, small enough to fit into a coat pocket and large enough to hold all the equipment necessary for a good day's fishing.

If you are going fishing for a longer period of time, you may like to have one of the new "crinkly" aluminum tackle boxes I noticed, for the fresh or salt water sportsman. Price of these is $3.98.

Guaranteed completely rustproof, they are lined with a plastic coating. Fastened at the top is a small hook, to hang from a belt

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

By Pat Dufour

These are the restless days for yachtsmen. The frostbiting season has only weeks to run before the winter sailors store their dinghies or get them ready to use as a work boat with their larger summer

Those that still have their boats land-bound on wooden cradles count the weeks until launching day.

Although summer sailing offers endless hours of pleasant cruising and bolsterous racing, the elusive March sun colors a day on the water with a magic unknown to those who restrict their heating to warping times.

a day on the water that restrict their boating to warmer times.

To nose out of the bay, passing the familiar landmarks that now take on an aura of mystery in their mist wrappings, is to savor a spirit of adventure unknown during the summer months. Then, whatever course one sets produces an armada months, boats, sailing or powering with the intentness of of small boats, sailing or powering with the intentness of drivers on a four-lane highway.

FISHING OFF LEDGE

On Sunday, boats were few and far between except for a small fleet that hovered around Broachie Ledge, their sweater-clad owners intent on their March fishing.

Members of an exclusive club, the fishermen exchanged easantries, within an hour achieving a familiarity unequalled under ordinary conditions.

From a woman's viewpoint, these are the days that demand the least amount of time in the "galley." During summer, catering becomes a thing of prideful challenge. For even one day's cruising it seems imperative to stock the larder with a gourmet selection that defies the crew's ability to consume. You pack basic foods as well. But these are viewed mainly as "safety valves," only to be considered when supplies run low or sailing is strenuous, demanding the cook's constant presence on the fo'c's'le or in the cockpit.

These are the days when the cook gets a reprieve. Carry some clam chowder in a thermos, brew some steaming-hot coffee, add to this crackers and cheese, and your skipper will laud you as the best cook affoat! Should you take along some goodies from a delicatessen store, he'll be begging you to sign on for a round-the-world cruise!

A FEATHERED 'RECEIVING LINE'

Perhaps because of the loneliness of the winter months, water birds become bold, dipping and swirling as you pass through the channel by Trial Island.

Their raticous calls seem to welcome you back to their territory. The zing of the wind playing in the boat's shrouds seems to complete the off-beat exchange of greetings.

Twilight comes early and as you head back to the moorings lights flicker on in the homes that ring the shore, giving the illusion of a cluster of jewels, spilled from a courtesan's jewel case.

Sails stowed and lines secured, you row for shore, the only sound being the squeak of oarlocks.

A backward glance shows your boat coquettishly rocking at the buoy, every line sending a subtle invitation to return next weekend. We will!

Outside Areas Blamed In Delay On Rec Centre

DUNCAN - Duncan Kinsmer Club blames lack of support from adjacent unorganized areas for delaying its plans for a recreation centre.

The club made its allegations Monday when endorsing a Chamber of Commerce resolu-tion calling on city council to set up a recreation commission.

A second letter endorsing the Chamber proposal was sent by the local Kiwanis Club. Mayor Jack Dobson said he felt this question should be referred to the parks committee. They should try to revive the almost moribund Community Centre Association to co-operate with a recreation commission.

RESIDENTIAL SCHOOLS NO LONGER NEEDED

Indian residential schools are no longer needed in B.C., John Squire (NDP-Alberni) told the legislature Tuesday. He said they had long outlived their usefulness and should be used only as boarding houses for native pupils from remote regions who are attending regular public schools.

Pupils in Indian residential schools are segregated not only by race and color but by creed," said Mr. Squire. He added: "The sooner these residential schools are closed the sooner I, for one, will be happy.'

Does the earth have a shadow?

Wherever you go, your faithful shadow goes with you. Sometimes it gets lost in the darker shadows around you and you do not see it. Sometimes it is taller than you are. If our whopping world has a shadow, surely it must be a whopping whale of a shadow.

VOICE OF BROADWAY

WHAT ELSE IS NEW-New York had a wonderful New Yorky night because "The Sound of Music" opened-and was as marvelous as predicted last August by your local seerand afterwards the party at the Americana Hotel was staged better than any "tribute" I have ever attended, and graced by more celebrities than any reporter's notebook could Start, of course, with the star of the film, Julie Andrews, Oh, well, it's a smashing picture.)

Then there was Robert Wise, the director, who had understandably waited out the movie in Jack Dempsey's bar, in blue and gold brocade; beautiful Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein in flame-colored chiffon, Mrs. Richard Rodgers looking the perfection of chic, Dorothy Stickney on stage in a black sheath punctuated by slippers with silver buckles, Florence Henderson singing "Hello. Young Lovers" in a slender ballgown of red brocade, the great Richard Rodgers making a speech of just the right length for a man with perfect timing, Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse looking about 35-years old—and they must be 40 if they're a day—and the genius Joshua Logan participating in humorous reading from Oscar Hammerstein's trivial mail, confessing to such immense nervousness that his wife, Nedda, had bolstered his morale with a tranquilizer.

There were some tears shed when Qscar's most cheerful words were uttered, and his most inspiring songs sung. The benefit was a tribute given by the Mary MacArthur Memorial Fund of the March of Dimes at which Oscar Hammerstein II received a posthumous award, and no one who had ever known his kindness, or appreclated his giant talent for the in the chorus of "Oh, What A Beautiful Morning?" Julie Andrews sang along with the least talented but nevertheless reverent admirers of the late lyricist. So did Harry Belafonte, who was at our table with his enchanting wife, Julie. So did Roddy McDowall and Beatrice Lillie-ever chic in her trademark monkey's cap to match her luxurious dress—and Gen. James Van Fleet and Senator Javits and Rep. John Lindsay

I remember the night when "Plain and Fancy," which my husband produced, opened on Broadway. Dick was young and inexperienced in the theatre in comparison to the great Hammerstein, but as the lights went up at intermission and we got out into the aisle, Oscar put his arm on Dick's shoulder, grinned, and said:

"Relax. It's a hit. You're in." A small thing like that would never make "The Sound of Music" a great picture, although "The Sound of Music" is a great picture.

But the memories of those small things, all rushing back at the same time, made the tribute to Oscar Hammerstein II real and touching and something he would have been proud of, if his modesty would have allowed him pride in himself.

Sidney chariman A. A. Cor-mack will resign and call an missioners will do the same

His offer was made today in an effort to settle the controversy over inadequate admin-Istrative practices which has split the commission since the start of the year.

Times by the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association to Education Week. In this article David P. Reimer, a teacher at Oak Bay Senior Secondary School, sets down so pertinent questions which are being asked in connection with the role of social studies in future education

All parents and educators should agree that the social studies ought to play a leading role in develop-ing clear-thinking citizens of Canada.

But what knowledge, skills, and attitudes will be required of the future Canadian citizen?

In view of the tremendous mass of knowledge—growing daily—what parts of it should the teacher select and require the student to learn? How much, for example, of what we ask students to memorin grades four to seven will have any validity or revelance by the time they complete grade 12.

Recently a professor of sociology at the University of British Columbia told a group of teachers that the most important objective of the social studies should be to make young people capable of adjusting to change. Certainly, when one thinks of the possible impact of automation on business and industry, one realizes that individuals may have to be retrained several times during their working lifetime

And what of those individuals who because of limited ability will not be called upon to work at all in the production of goods and services? What new values and attitudes will govern social relationships in the society of the near future? How does one, in fact, make individuals into human chameleons or amoebas,

It seems logical that, for the next generation, the relatively advanced nations will be devoting ever-increasing amounts money and human effort towards raising standards of health and productivity in the less-developed nations. Somehow we must develop in young Canadians an empathy for peoples of other societies.

The question is: what methods of research and study will best develop this understanding?

* * *

As British Columbia education is trying to adjust itself in a changing situation, educators are asking themselves all these questions and many more. From the public we will need empathy and a great deal of moral and financial support.

To solve the problem of selection from the almost boundless sea of knowledge, we may have to put greater stress on how learn than on what to learn.
In the jargon of educators this means greater emphasis on structure than on content of the discipline.

In other words, selecting from history and geography those areas of study which would appear to be most relevant to our times and to the immediate future, the teacher would show his sudents how to select and evaluate data, and how to develop valid generalizations based upon available data.

The social studies teacher must have at his disposal the most up-to-date teaching aids—books, pamphlets, maps, films and film strips—if he is to compete successfully with all the other "educating" media acting on the student outside the

A way will have to be found to obtain for the classrooms and school libraries reliable, factual information about conditions and events around the world.

Too often our sources of information present history with a national or cultural bias; even statistics are not always reli-

Yet we must seek after truth; this is what the social studies teacher is dedicated to do.

SIDNEY CHAIRMAN OFFERS TO QUIT, CALL ELECTION

By HUMPHRY DAVY mack will resign and call an election if other village commissioners will do the same.

His offer was made today in an effort to settle the controversy over inadequate administrative practices which has split the commission since the start of the year.

Two other commission Douglas Taylor and J. G. Mit-chell, at Monday's meeting talked about resigning and calling an election.

But they received no support from Commissioners Andreas Boas and L. R. Christian.

However, there's a hitch to calling an election. Under the Municipal Act the commission-ers face the possibility of a $50 fine if they resign without reasonable excuse. A spokesman for the department of municipal affairs said today the controversy involving the commission would "unlikely" be considered a reasonable excuse for resigning.
